'White Fang': Source, paper and mark scheme

Name

Source A

This story is set on a farm in Canada. White Fang is the name of a wild, wolf-like dog guarding the house of the Scott family: Judge Scott, the judge's wife and the judge's son, Weedon Scott, whom White Fang calls 'master'. In the middle of the night an intruder called Jim Hall breaks into the house to try and murder the judge. White Fang refers to Jim Hall as 'the strange god'.

1 One night, while all the house slept, White Fang awoke and lay very quietly. And very quietly he smelled the air and read the message it bore of a strange god's presence. And to his ears came sounds of the strange god's movements. White Fang burst into no furious outcry. It was not his way. The strange god walked softly, but more softly walked White Fang, for he had no clothes to 5 rub against the flesh of his body. He followed silently. In the wild he had hunted live meat that 6 was infinitely¹ timid², and he knew the advantage of surprise.

7 The strange god paused at the foot of the great staircase and listened, and White Fang was as dead, so without movement was he as he watched and waited. Up that staircase the way led to the master and to the master's dearest possessions. White Fang bristled³, but waited. The 10 strange god's foot lifted. He was beginning the ascent.

Then it was that White Fang struck. He gave no warning, with no snarl anticipated his own action. Into the air he lifted his body in the spring that landed him on the strange god's back. White Fang clung with his fore-paws to the man's shoulders, at the same time burying his fangs into the back of the man's neck. He clung on for a moment, long enough to drag the god over 15 backward. Together they crashed to the floor. White Fang leaped clear, and, as the man 16 struggled to rise, was in again with the slashing fangs.

17 The family awoke in alarm. The noise from downstairs was as that of a score of battling fiends. There were revolver shots. A man's voice screamed once in horror and anguish. There was a great snarling and growling, and over all arose a smashing and crashing of furniture and glass.

20 But almost as quickly as it had arisen, the commotion died away. The struggle had not lasted more than three minutes. The frightened household clustered at the top of the stairway. From below, as from out of an abyss⁴ of blackness, came up a gurgling sound, as of air bubbling through water. Sometimes this gurgle became sibilant⁵, almost a whistle. But this, too, quickly died down and ceased. Then naught came up out of the blackness save a heavy panting of 25 some creature struggling sorely for air.

Weedon Scott pressed a button, and the staircase and downstairs hall were flooded with light. Then he and Judge Scott, revolvers in hand, cautiously descended. There was no need for this caution. White Fang had done his work. In the midst of the wreckage of overthrown and smashed furniture, partly on his side, his face hidden by an arm, lay a man. Weedon Scott bent 30 over, removed the arm and turned the man's face upward. A gaping throat explained the manner of his death.

"Jim Hall," said Judge Scott, and father and son looked significantly at each other.

Then they turned to White Fang. He, too, was lying on his side. His eyes were closed, but the lids slightly lifted in an effort to look at them as they bent over him, and the tail was perceptibly 35 agitated in a vain effort to wag. Weedon Scott patted him, and his throat rumbled an acknowledging growl. But it was a weak growl at best, and it quickly ceased. His eyelids drooped and went shut, and his whole body seemed to relax and flatten out upon the floor.

infinitely¹ - extremely timid² – shy

bristled³ – stiffened and lifted his head

abyss⁴ – a gulf, a hole

sibilant⁵ – hissing

The writer presents White Fang as an intelligent dog through the past tense verbs 'watched and waited', which imply he is observant, alert and aware. This is reinforced by the phrase 'bristled, but waited', where the repetition stresses that White Fang was clever enough to delay his attack until the intruder was more vulnerable. Also, the verb 'bristle' has connotations of him seething with anger and aggression, whilst remaining patient yet poised to strike. The verb 'struck' is onomatopoeic and so has a sharp quality which reinforces the speed and

The description of him 'burying his fangs into the back of the man's neck', is particularly striking. The phrase 'slashing fangs' has savage connotations and has the effect of further presenting the dog's viciousness. It implies the relentlessness of the attack, as if never-ending. The whole effect on the reader is that we see White Fang as ferocious and could think of him as a vampire-like villain in a horror genre.

The phrase 'bristled, but waited' shows us that even though he was angry and ready to strike, he was still in control. Also the verb 'struck' is very effective because it makes it sound like White Fang's first leap was very short and quick so the man did not expect it. The writer's use of 'slashing fangs' conveys movement and fierce intention and seems more like a description in a horror story than an adventure story. It implies that the attack is vicious.

AO2 Explain, comment on and analyse how writers use language and structure to achieve effects and influence readers, using relevant subject terminology to support their views
This question assesses how the writer has structured a text. Structural features can be: at a whole text level eg. beginnings / endings / perspective shifts; at a paragraph level eg. topic change / aspects of cohesion; and at a sentence level when judged to contribute to whole structure.
Level	Skills Descriptors	How to arrive at a mark	Indicative Standard
Level 4 Perceptive, detailed analysis 7-8 marks	Shows detailed and perceptive understanding of structural features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Analyses the effects of the writer's choice of structural features • Selects a judicious range of examples 	At the top of the level, a candidate's response will meet all of the skills descriptors.	This indicative standard is not a model answer, or a complete response. Nor does it seek to exemplify any particular content. Rather, it is an indication of the standard for the level. The structure of the text suggests different narrative perspectives and builds up to a sense of mystery at the end. At the beginning, the writer recreates the viewpoint of White Fang, with the first paragraph giving us the dog's initial awareness of the intruder. The writer tells us that White Fang quietly 'smelled the air and read the message it bore of a strange god's presence.' This allows the reader an insight into the dog's thoughts, perceptions and his perspective of the situation which is more acute than that of a

The action then shifts to White Fang's attack signalled by the short sentence 'He gave no warning', which indicates how sudden and then vicious it was. The focus then changes to the family hearing a noise downstairs, significantly 'There were revolver shots' - a clue to the sense of mystery at the end. Towards the end, we notice the structural device of dialogue, "'Jim Hall," said Judge Scott', which is used to expose the identity of the intruder for the reader. In the final paragraph the focus returns to White Fang, where we learn that he is motionless on the floor. The focus on the injured dog reminds us of the opening of the text where White Fang was astute and powerful, characteristics which have now been lost. The reader is left on a cliff-hanger as we wonder if White Fang survives his injuries.
Level 3 Clear, relevant explanation 5-6 marks	Shows clear understanding of structural features: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Explains clearly the effects of the writer's choice of structural features Selects a range of relevant examples Makes clear and accurate use of subject terminology 	At the top of the level, a candidate's response will meet all of the skills descriptors. At the bottom of the level, a candidate will have Level 2 and at least one of the skills descriptors.	The writer structures the text by suggesting different narrative perspectives. It is written in the third person but seems structured through different viewpoints, starting with White Fang's as he becomes aware of an intruder but 'lay very quietly...and smelled the air.' This is effective because it allows the reader to understand White Fang's thoughts, and then to experience the attack like he experiences it. The structural feature of the short sentence 'He gave no warning' conveys the quickness of the dog's attack. The viewpoint then changes to that of the family as they 'clustered at the top of the stairway' and heard 'from below...a gurgling sound.' The focus then shifts to what the family actually saw: a dead intruder. The last paragraph is exciting in a frightening way because we return to White Fang. It is a powerful way to end because it leaves the reader with an unanswered question, is White Fang dead or not?

It then switches to 'Then it was that White Fang struck' and how he attacked the man, Jim Hall. The reader sees what White Fang saw and did, but then it changes to focus on Judge Weedon and Scott Weedon and what they saw. There is some speech when the judge says "Jim Hall". This speech makes the character seem more real. At the end it is back to focus on White Fang when his 'eyes closed' and his body was flat. Focus this part of your answer on the second half of the Source from line 17 to the end.

A reader of the novel said: “This section of the text where we learn what happened in the struggle between White Fang and the intruder makes me feel desperately sorry for White Fang.”

To what extent do you agree?

In your response, you could:

- consider your own impression of what happens in the struggle
- evaluate how much the writer makes you feel sorry for White Fang
- support your response with references to the text.

This indicative standard is not a model answer, or a complete response. Nor does it seek to exemplify any particular content. Rather, it is an indication of the standard for the level. I don't entirely agree because I don't think the reader making the statement relates to how savage White Fang's attack is. The writer emphasises how the intruder suffers intense pain and fatal injuries with the phrase 'screamed once in horror and anguish', and the present participles in 'snarling and growling' which suggest White Fang's relentless aggression. In addition, the description of the man's 'gurgles' that becomes a 'whistle' is onomatopoeic in that both words imitate the sound made by the intruder. 'Gurgles' with its longer sounding vowels implies blood is

In this interpretation, you could say that a reader sympathises with the dead man. Alternatively, I can appreciate what the reader is saying about having sympathy for White Fang, especially in the last few sentences. The writer achieves this when he tells us how the dog's 'lids slightly lifted in an effort to look at them as they bent over him.' Again, it is the deliberate use of the adverb 'slightly' indicating the effort required which adds to the sadness of the scene. He 'was lying on his side' and his 'eyelids drooped and went shut'. It is a very emotive verb in that 'droop' suggests that White Fang is also slowly losing his strength and dying of his injuries. The writer wants us to remember not the attack itself, nor the suffering of the intruder, but the pitiful image of the dying dog.

The writer describes the effect of White Fang's attack in a graphic way, which emphasises how violent and vicious White Fang can be. For example, the description of the 'gurgle' that becomes a 'whistle' is quite disturbing because you realise that the intruder is being savaged to death by White Fang. Both words are onomatopoeic in that they imitate the sound made by the intruder. 'Gurgle' is longer sounding and suggests liquid is present, like blood 'bubbling', whereas 'whistle' is shorter and seems to be about how he is finding it hard to breathe. Yet, the way it is written towards the end changes my opinion and I agree more with the reader. It is almost told from the point of view of White Fang's master as he sees the injured dog on the floor. He 'was lying on his side' and his 'eyes drooped and went shut'. It is a very emotive verb in that 'droop' suggests that White Fang is also slowly dying of his injuries, as if he no longer

At the end of the Source, it shows how White Fang is suffering from his injuries. The description of his eyes which are 'drooped shut' has a big effect on a reader. The word 'drooped' makes it seem as though he doesn't have the strength to keep his eyes open. It would build up emotion in the reader because we have seen how bravely White Fang fought to defend his master. I think that I would also say that I feel a mixture of fear and sadness.
